THE INVESTIGATIVE REPORTER
January 1982

The Investigative Reporter will present our readers with predictions each month of what the future holds on national and international political fronts.

RENEGADE CIA AGENTS

It's beginning to look as if nothing short of a special prosecutor will ever uncover the far-reaching depredations of renegade ex-CIA agents Frank Terpil and Edwin Wilson. These experts in international terrorism boasted that they had many friends in high places when they were running guns to Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi. Trouble is, they may have been right. That would explain why the investigations into their tangled misdeeds have been so lackadaisical and poorly coordinated.

PREDICTION: The fuse may have been lit under the Dynamite-dealing Duo at last. President Reagan has been told about Terpil and Wilson, and he wants action. Look for a major expose.
